Tips on preparing your bike for riding season

Nice weather is approaching and you might be thinking about dusting the bike off and taking it for a spin. Before you take off, it is important to make sure everything is in working order. Here are some essential steps to get your bike road-ready:

- Clean your bike thoroughly to inspect for any wear or damage, especially focusing on rubber parts and electrical components.
- Check your tires for cracks, abnormal swelling, and inspect the tire date codes. Consider replacing tires that are three to five years old.
- Clean and inspect the final drive, including the chain and sprockets. Replace them if necessary for optimal performance and safety.
- Inspect brakes and cables, ensuring equal pad material on disc brakes and checking for signs of leakage or wear.
- Clean out old gas from the carburetor, if applicable, and inspect for any blockages or damage.
- Test the battery and charging system using a voltmeter. Replace the battery if the voltage is significantly lower even after charging.
- Check fluid levels, including oil, and replace with new fluids as needed.

After completing these steps, take your motorcycle for a test ride around the block to ensure everything is working properly before hitting the road. Remember to use a battery tender and drain the gas next time you store your bike to maintain its condition. Enjoy your ride!
